THE WHEELIN

On a Wrong Scent.

Mr. Lamb quotes from an editorial article in this paper, under date of February 1st, 1862, the following:

"If the slavery matter is Hkely to be constitution of the Union soldiers and logarity of the state of February 1st, 1862, the following:

"We have probably said about all that we should say in regard to Mr. Lamb's late address to the people of this State. Possibly, some may consider that we have already spent more attention on it than it's importance warranted. We had no intention, and we certainly have no desire, to carry on an indefinite discussion with the author upon points not embraced in the address, and in no manner germane to it. Mr. Lamb, we are somewhat surprised to find, seems inclined to forego the main question or retreat, with citations from articles that have appeared one time and other during the last five years in our columns upon the New State and the Slavery questions. He even goes so far out of his bis way we judge it is bilm, to ask us how we can consistently speak well of Senator Willey's late letter to the Union and poolege of Monongalia county, since in other days and non other topics we may be a supposed of Monongalia county, since in other days and non other topics we may be a supposed on the poolege of Monongalia county, since in other days and non other topics we may be a supposed on the topics we may be a supposed on the topics we may be a supposed on the topics we may be a supposed of Monongalia county, since in other days and non other topics we may be a supposed on the topics we may be a supposed on the suppose of the suppose of destroying his way we judge it is bilm, to ask us have a present on the country in his way we judge it is bilm, to ask us have a present on the country in his way we judge it is bilm, to ask us how we can consistently speak well of Senator Willey's late letter to the Union people of Monongalia county, since in other days and non other topics we may be a supposed to the supposed of the suppose of the supposed to the sup people of Monongalia county, since in other days and apon other topics we have found fault with the Senator. In this way, and by such side issues as country has ever claimed, so far as we these, Mr. Lamb seems desirous to disthese, Mr. Lamb seems desirous to dis-sipate public attention over such an area of controversy as will subordinate, if not shelly conceal, the contradictory

We do not propose to go over all the ground indicated in these side issues. No one knows better than Mr. Lamb the grand struggle of the last five years. No one knows better than he how same the specific system of the last five years. No one knows better than he how much in advance of public expression we began the agitation of the New State issue, and how persistently we maintained it, at every proper juncture, until success crowned the agitation. No one knows better than Mr. Lamb how early we started in on the slavery question, and that never for a moment did we abate any proper expression of hostillity to the institution. Not a line can be quoted from our columns that does not harmonize with the steady progress that was making all the time towards its overthrow. We are sure that Mr. not harmonize with the steady progress that was making all the time towards its overthrow. We are sure that Mr. Lamb at least always regarded us as proceeding on both questions full faster than he was willing to proceed. And while we recognized that his footsteps were often slow, and sometimes reluctant, yet we never falled in like manner to recognize that there was a necessity to await the important adherence of such men as himself in order that the vital unity of the great party of the war and the country might be preserved in our midst. With all due respect toward our friend, we conceive the difference between him and us to have been that our natural tendency throughout the struggle was centripetal in its character, that is toward the magnetic impulse of the war, the anti-slavery character, that is toward the magnetic impulse of the war, the anti-slavery feeling of the country, while his prejudices had to be overcome and a certain amount of centrifugalism neutralized.

The very fact of Mr. Lamb's position at this time, standing as he does in full followship with those who conversed at the west very size to the union and new State are gradually coming around, and acknowledging the principles of the Union and new State prin registration, the registrars shall go around their townships.

We may mention that the amount of work involved in preparing the books and blanks has somewhat delayed their delivery. We learn, however, that the greater part of them have been forwarded by mail from the office of the Secretary of State to the county boards of registration, and that the last will be sent out to-morrow. The blanks acof registration, and that the last will be sent out to-morrow. The blanks accompanying the registration books, include the registration books, include the registry law and supplement; the law extending the time of holding the law extending the law submitting. the spring election; the law submitting the spring election; the law submitting the constitutional amendments, and copies of that amendment, blank oaths and commissions for the township registrars, and blank affidavits for the use of the registrars. So that when the documents come to hand the registrars will be fully instructed and armed. We trust the county boards will appoint registrars at once, and that the work of enrolling all qualified voters and excluding all persons who are disqualished will proceed promptly, vigorously and rigorously.

It is a fact that, as our Lewis county correspondent says, nothing ever struck as much terror to the hearts of the copperheads as this law. The only comfort we can give them is that it will be sternly and rigidly enforced. It disables no man who has not been avoluntary traitor to his Government, and who in nine cases out of ten will not be found but little better now.
